Research Interests

My research seeks to develop efficient and robust data-driven solutions for e-commerce, digital experimentation, supply chain analytics, and retailing using tools from statistical learning, reinforcement learning, game theory, and optimization. Most recently, I have been focusing on

1. Sequential prediction (e.g., demand forecast) and decision-making (e.g., recommendation, pricing, and inventory control) in dynamically changing environments
2. Cost-effective experimentation for off-policy evaluation and transfer learning

As part of it, I have been working closely with different companies, such as Amazon and AB InBev.

Awards

Honorable Mention, INFORMS George E. Nicholson 2019 Student Paper Competition
Finalist, POMS-JD.com 2019 Best Data-Driven Research Paper Competition
Finalist, INFORMS Service Science Section 2021 Best Cluster Paper Award

Teaching

Purdue MGMT36100 Operations Management

Instructor, 2021

– Enrollment: 135, undergraduate core class

MIT 1.266 Supply Chain and Demand Analytics

Teaching Assistant, 2021

– Enrollment: 25 (primarily MBA, Master of Supply Chain Management, and Leaders for Global Operations students)

MIT 1.267 Statistical Learning in Operations

Teaching Assistant, 2020 - 2021

– Enrollment: 15 (primarily PhD students)

MIT 15.774 The Analytics of Operations Management

Teaching Assistant, 2019

- Enrollment: 61 (primarily MBA, Master of Business Analytics, Supply Chain Management, and Leaders for Global Operations students)
- Core requirement for MIT Sloan Business Analytics Certificate
- Rating: 6.0/7.0
